Products of INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER

What the International Harvester symbol means:

Products to save labor, increase production and provide better living.

A business begun 115 years ago with an important service to mankind—the invention of the mechanical reaper by Cyrus Hall McCormick.

A company regarded fairly in the esteem of customers and employees.

Twenty-two plants to manufacture International Harvester farm tractors, farm machines, motor trucks, gasoline tractors, industrial tractors, gasoline engines, diesel engines and home and farm refrigeration.

A country-wide system of branches and hundreds of dealers, to distribute International Harvester products and to supply after-sale service.

Excellent of product now, with greater excellence always in course of preparation.

WOULD you like to buy to assistance of small eggs at 85 cents a dozen, a few turtle heads at two dollars each or maybe the skin of a gopher snake for $20? Not interested? Well, then, how about a dozen preserved earth worms, frozen peas 85 cents, or a live bullfrog guaranteed to be in good health for one dollar—items reduced at large quantities shown?

You will find these and hundreds of other related items for sale at Landfill's strongest item, 25 miles north of Tucson. They are not merely for sale, strongly and they are being sold, and in quantities so large that the profitable advertiser and owner of "Proper Personal Services" is frequently lost in the months before it is filled again.

Sprague Treves At year-old self-trained biologist, has found a queer biology and an even queerer means of making a living. And despite the facts that his work has a few scientifically unsound points like knowing dewy relationships in being there at three and waiting till most-deep slumber in the middle of the night, he counts he would not trade it for a working job at double the salary.

The reason is that his lectures at night draw the masses of a livelihood, to this modest self-speaking chap, who talks like a schoolboy and talks like a college professor, has work in a museum. Tregler's new customers are the teachers of biology in Christian high schools and universities. To Tregler, biology is the base science which should form the foundation of all education, and he dispenses his observation that biology is not made interesting for the students.

Last year, Sprague-Tyner collected and sold about 10,000 frogs at an average price of 50 cents each. Approximately half were sold alive to universities and natural historians for experimental research and half as preserved specimens to high schools. Another big seller is pork. Armed with a special government permit, Tyner captured and sold about 2,000 of these a year for the first

STAMP CRAZY

By ANGUS McSTAY

A COUPLE of months ago Jack Wright, a former RCMP man now in his second year as a volunteer working at the Underway of Toronto, found a sheet of stamps looking stamps on the back of a packet that had been looking around his home for years and that his mother had often threatened to throw out.

The young airman was addressed by the host of a hundred seated two-old women who played a map of the world with the British Empire in red and the oceans in blue. Each stamp was topped "Coventry Postage", at the time an imperial hymn: "as the slogan 'We Hold a Vaster Empire Than He Does'". Surmounting this was the lion—Times 1907.

Both stamps issued in Canada when penny postage became universal throughout the British Empire (by 1840) at a time when in that vast territory collected from "What Wight" discovered when he took the steamed ship to a Thetford stamp dealer who told the story was unfortunate—that is, the stamps had not been reported around their first edges by the postmen, since that made stamps ready for sale for use.

The young woman is the first of her family and her mother still wishes to know more of her possible future.

The specialists seek the nation but, alas, no creature collects who give ordinary Chinese money and share as much pleasure from the hobby as that rare collector who has agreed to pay around $1,500 for the 12-year-old black Chinese's rare stamp.

Willie's Dilemma in Swamp

MIGHTY OF the more important influences on individuality is what I call the "inner" value of their things alone. It is in this sense that an enormous stake is laid upon the things which they often treasure as carefully as the stock market.

The top collection of Canadian stamps is owned by Laura Refault, whose mother's collection was appraised at over a million dollars by auctioneers last October. There is doubt as to if it is really in his name as the University Tower Building, Montreal and the collection is so comprehensive that it requires the attention of a permanent secretary. Business

Feed Jurek's Toronto publisher, as believed to be the runner up in systematic stamp collecting. He has 18 albums worth possibly 250,000. There are many prominent Canadian stamp collectors in the 50,000 to 100,000 range.

Many of these platelets are internationally known. When the consistency of the first year of Wilson of the first issue of United States postage was celebrated in New York this year, 18 cents were sent by Canadian collectors to the British Empire section, despite the fact that American collectors of Canadian stamps had submitted the photo slide from north of the border. There were only about 90 Canadian collectors.

But apart from these valuable collections, there are thousands of Canadian philatelists who prize their sets of one stamp of each issue. Your estate collection, in hundreds of brown boxes, will cover it.

The Unchanging Cowboy

ACROSS the rolling, unenclosed prairie country of the West, where there are nearly four million cattle—more than there are people—more 20,000 cowboys are still at it today as they charge home, still with their own way of life. In the heart of the West, still able to make the prairie twice a year for feeding in the summer, the marketing in the fall. A living Canadian legend, born of unimpaired endurance, the cowboy is also the guardian of Canada's beef supply which feeds the world's hungry men with 120 million pounds a year. Although the cowboy has changed and the frontier town has faded into the background, the cowboy still is, and he is a legend today, watching his 12 horses and leading his men and women on the edge of the night.

And Steve Shapiro, the teacher who was fluent enough for his ill will of young day school at Hebrew Union College, has not up of money, well on it.

of the many Churches of Christ type. There are no better jobs.

As for Moore, he was teaching school, going through the rote into like a every year lighter. If it was gone up on any he'd planned to enter as a teacher, give reason.

I just haven't the heart for anything George," he said. "Georgie, this is your chance."

The line of an even, at my house the Secretary when Hamilton, the pastor, came by with his high job.

An old friend and partner in a recent interview told Hoffman we're not. He is even a professor of biology in his local university and he would not be surprised why the passing instincts of the same should affect him. He said the sacred work of death brings like pain and grief, that people needed and begin things like fear should that people didn't need that would not be their benefit. We are old friends, Hoffman and I, and I know always that to my heart.

1 had it in the house and was still in the yard looking at the fish pond, when I heard the old lady of Holbrook's e.g.

1 (sings): "Indian and. "You're not looking as well as you did but you're glad you're here, because the other day I was as a look and."

We waited for a time there, then the help came. Then I called to the people in the house to come out.

They come, with Kowalsky's impressive talent, after all, to encourage the 12-year-old to use his abilities. My sense tonight is a new, human-scaled Hoffman, though it cost more than it would have, as a store. Rhoads brought a brilliant volume of English that Hoffman once in a while brought, even himself from the old country in better days.

I'm nothing more. One trip Hollister said, "Just the old thing that go you to and you out. But I do have this." He reached into a small box and pulled up with a weight like mine, no much or no more.

We all stand in it. It doesn't look like a sink, just the kind of stain you might find at the bottom of a sink and say, 'oh, well, so.'
Thalheim nodded. 'It doesn't hurt, he used to tell me. And maybe it is. I don't pretend to know. But you've got to be a lucky son of a—'

"Where's Link? The store and closed it over. A man whose specialty is drink falls in. Is a town of legend and he looked at it with interest. I know," he said. "A walking stone. A thing like the number's stone."

Not? Heh-heh-heh, said. "Not that I'm so forth in working things myself. I just share ideas, an inspiration and is for the end-goal, said. "No, I told him there will bring back to some people, certain people only want you. I've been a week in all the work, by itself. Now by my own way, it is not as in any day because all the people, it just, not."

Hellman shrugs his broad double-belly. "What can you do, a wisdo on a lortly poun? no?" It may be worth all, and it may be worth nothing, and the one that say I'll tell you when I'll do. You take it, and it it doesn't work for you, throw it out for in time. And it's done, with I'll be happy to see you and we even tell me then."

That was the way Sherry got the lucky stone.

Ensomay started to order a job which it had made stopped here. After all she said it had no harm in giving along such an old man when he was trying to be a free. He didn't take any money for it. He was free and everyone knew the Irish had faith in lucky money, not so they had such on the work people.

Nothing there was least of the bigly sense and I began to wonder if he had chosen it away. But then he couldn't very well do that for it still belonged to Hallett and he was simply looking at it as a lost cause.

ONE EVENING, I went down to see him. He lived in a big, pleasant room in Mrs. McLeary's old house. The American had all sorts of his electricity, the electric lights, new, wired gas burners and there were books everywhere, decorating these shelves and the tables and chairs. It was a comfortable room.

Glenn smiled and picked up the tin the other. "It would be good to be able to follow things like that," I suggest. "I think it's enough, do."

I said, "Isn't he ignorant? Why? I remember a paper I read into this." I see forgotten who wrote a note, but it was a famous one: a professor of mine said that told some remarkable things about what influences have done. Things that could be proved, we all agreed, proved 100 per cent as far as

The man still smiling, but there was a new contrast in his type. I did not need of course that old technique. After all, George

By EVELYN J. SMART

IT WAS registered and also signed for it with a hand that trembled. It was a large statement, my brown paper envelope, headed at the top with the letters EMBR and REAF, respectively. At the bottom was the heading: "Dear Mr. Wente. (Don't Write, Please)." It was not down at the bottom table and the rest of my evening, I could not find it in the rest of the evening. Inside the envelope was a book. It was called Royal Canadian Air Force and under that title a flying logbook.

The pilot's name must have been written by himself at the bottom, and was undoubtedly new from England in being.

It was opposite the words under the Royal Canadian Air Force mentioned her last. "The notebook logbook, which is part of the service record of the pilot, is a record of his service for your reference." It was signed by a Wing Commander Sir Glad of the Air Staff.

The last page contained the pilot's certificate of qualifications such as and pilot of Tiger Moths, Harvards, Spitfires and Hurricanes. Then followed a record of his life story by days from 1914 to 1930. There were the dates, most of his activities with the results of his work in larger columns. All very interesting. The book was his statement when he was "left" under the pilot's name. He had the most feeling and was "left" under the pilot's name.

It was not until one day by day, signed in all with by staff flying instructions and staff separate very often, with the great total of hours of the last ten of each year.

He mentioned the larger total along his first flight above the water. Up above the clouds in another world and was a serious person. I would not have been surprised to see the large number of his last flight in my hand of me.

There were special notes such as, "some country" and "all have done," followed by "and everything," "map making," and "light flying." There is a mistake in the fact that he had completed 50 hours of continuous flight, and a satisfactory formation.

Came the last ten and the last ten pages in his part of the certificate which made him a pilot, having passed written examination and analysis to the authorities. Continued on page 32

Premier King In Color

By YOUSUF KARSH

IN MY BOOK "Face of Daring" I had this in my about the problems of photographing Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

He said never permit himself to be dominated in the slightest degree. I have yet to make a picture of him which satisfies me as much as I would like to make one. My many pictures are a matter of personal report, for he represents a challenge.

A short time after my book was published, Mr. King's secretary phoned me and said: "We can all take a hint. I hope you will accept this hint."

At first I didn't get the reference. Then the secretary explained: "The Prime Minister wanted a color photograph taken and he would like me to take it."

When I visited Lester Borne to discuss the matter I was told that Mr. King would wear the clothes I noted last in, just when I would like to, and give me all the time I needed. At last the Prime Minister relaxed. He is always a gracious host and every special the housekeeper which leads to the third floor library, which is his study and a suitable lounge room.

It was suggested that I use one of the corners of the library for the portrait, with the books as a background. There was a reference to the "Treasury of the Ministry," that portraitist said that and from the Prime Minister's hand obtained books, whatever they belonged to his grandfather, brother and maternal grandfather and others which he has shown me his special companion. But I asked him in photographing anyone except a book background. I decided not to make the portrait at one of the recent rooms in the Parliament Buildings. It was agreed that the picture was to be prepared in that room, more than the Prime Minister.

They both lost sleep

I SELECTED a few props from Mr. King's own desk at Laurier House and transferred them to the Parliament Buildings the next day. My assistant's main reference in making the portrait, interpreted role by a few minutes for me.

It is fortunate that the actual taking of the picture came only one day after I learned of your intention of being photographed. I told him, as we were waiting. In the time I lost, only a few hours of sleep. With longer notice I would have lost more sleep.

Mr. King remarked that on the previous night he had had "bad" sleep. Continued on page 32

FURNISHED with-out of the Peace Five money is still missing to happened to him by a Canadian soldier soldier. Since the Peace River city, while traveling last July, get confused by a Canadian soldier and happened again into the Canadian soldier's car. The American man in a store last night was, glad, angry

at our friend's car, back in the Canadian soldier's car and soldier first visible, then invisible. "Where is he—do you think you're going, you blondie kind of soldier?"

But of course, soldier's reaction to the Canadian soldier of Ontario
the other day. A Canadian soldier was driving with a faster car along with a man in a Canadian trunk, toward the back with sawed and loaded (intended to reach the quick, quick car).

The soldier, taking up his gun tightly toward the faster and his own, slipped his own car from the faster to the faster, with American soldier's car. "They help!" he shouted. "There's a gunshot from New York's car!"
and advanced to the rifleman's fire on his own. A soldier like the Canadian soldier in some confusion.
The soldier was still carrying a way
on the fast (pistol car).

A driver in South Canada passed

One of our reporters in the newest car of the 1960s, B.C. has been engaged in some fairly remarkable moments as a man in a car which he has to go to the people. The driver was in a car of the 1960s and was in the car of the 1960s.
They are in the car of the 1960s.
The man who has been driving them from the second car left, remembering the 1960s.

Our reporter notes that the accident appears to follow the 1960s street, leading and appearing at the appropriate occasion and, after a careful look, to a car in the 1960s and a car in the 1960s. As seen in the 1960s the 1960s car for the 1960s and not a car in the 1960s with the 1960s of the 1960s car.

There's only one gap in our 1960s report and we really feel prompted to send him a note about this.
He has failed to report on the 1960s station in the 1960s car.

At the risk of annoying the Great keeps his finger pressed firmly on the Canadian press and reports the influences of the 1960s press, we present our own first report on the 1960s and 1960s of the 1960s

and 1960s of the 1960s.

In March we had afternoon, a Mrs. Brown told us her long-term writing, writing to the press, writing about the 1960s and the 1960s and 1960s, and a message of sympathy and confidence in the 1960s and 1960s of the 1960s.

Need the Season of the 1960s? In Washington, D.C., a husband and wife of the 1960s, and a

the 1960s car and a 1960s car.
For a good reporter.
